www.fsis.usda.gov

People at risk for listeriosis and their family members or individuals preparing food for them should:

Reheat until steaming hot the following types of ready-to-eat foods: hot dogs, luncheon meats, cold cuts, fermented and dry sausage and other deli-style meat and poultry products. Thoroughly reheating food can help kill any bacteria that might be present. If you cannot reheat these foods, then do not eat them.

Wash hands with hot, soapy water after handling these types of ready-to-eat foods. (Wash for at least 20 seconds.) Also wash cutting boards, dishes, and utensils. Thorough washing helps eliminate any bacteria that might get on your hands or other surfaces from food before it is reheated.

Do not eat soft cheeses such as feta, Brie, Camembert, blue-veined or Mexican-style cheese. You can eat hard cheeses, processed cheeses, cream cheese, cottage cheese and yogurt.

Do not drink raw, unpasteurized milk or eat foods made from it, such as unpasteurized cheese.

Observe all expiration dates for perishable items that are precooked or ready-to-eat.

All of the products bear the establishment code “P-1351” inside the USDA seal of inspection.

The turkey and chicken products were produced on August 14 and distributed to retail stores and other institutions nationwide.

“We want consumers to be aware of the recall because of the potential for foodborne illness,” said Dr. Garry L. McKee, FSIS administrator. “Diners may also wish to ask if their meals contain the products.”

As part of a continuing outbreak investigation, FSIS collected a microbiological investigative sample at the plant on Oct. 2 that returned positive results for Listeria monocytogenes. There is no link between the recalled products and Listeria monocytogenes illnesses in Northeast states. However, FSIS is continuing its investigation.

Since early September, FSIS investigators, working with the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and state health officials, have been probing every possible lead in an attempt to discover the source of the illnesses.

Overall, more than 120 illnesses and 20 deaths have been attributed to Listeria monocytogenes in eight Northeast states. The CDC has linked 43 of the cases together, accounting for seven deaths.

To date, FSIS' Microbial Outbreaks and Special Projects Branch (MOSPB) laboratory in Athens, Ga., has conducted almost 400 tests on products that the agency regulates.

"More than 50 scientists at FSIS' laboratories, regional epidemiologists, consumer safety officers, compliance officers and personnel in the field and at USDA headquarters are continuing our determined effort to find the source of this outbreak," said McKee.

Consumption of food contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes can cause listeriosis, an uncommon but potentially fatal disease. Healthy people rarely contract listeriosis. Listeriosis can cause high fever, severe headache, neck stiffness and nausea. Listeriosis can also cause miscarriages and stillbirths, as well as serious and sometimes fatal infections in those with weak immune systems – infants, the frail or elderly and persons with chronic disease, with HIV infection, or taking chemotherapy.

Anyone concerned about an illness should contact a physician.

Consumers with questions about the recall may contact the company's consumer information recall hotline at (877) 260-7110. Media with questions about the recall may contact Ray Atkinson, public relations manager, Pilgrim's Pride Corporation, at (540) 896-0406.

Consumers with other food safety questions can phone the toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555. The hotline is available in English and Spanish and can be reached from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (Eastern Time), Monday through Friday. Recorded food safety messages are available 24 hours a day.
